Lucky ducklings rescued

PLUCKY DUCKIES — These four ducklings were saved by a Midtown Palo Alto resident. Photo from Palo Alto Animal Control.

A Midtown Palo Alto resident spotted four ducklings crossing Middlefield Road, corralled them into a carport and called Animal Control Officer Cody Macartney for help.

The rest of the family was nowhere to be found in a nearby creek, so Macartney brought the ducklings on April 22 to the Peninsula Humane Society's wildlife center in Saratoga, where they were fed duck crumble and fresh greens three times a day, spokeswoman Colleen Crowley said.

The ducklings were weighed and examined every day for a week. They swam in a pool and had good appetites, so they were brought to an animal sanctuary outside of Chico, where they'll grow up and be released, Crowley said.

Who is to blame for fallen tree?

BY BRANDON CARTWRIGHT
Local Government

STAFFORD — A large oak tree near the Marin County fairgrounds has been cut down after it fell across a road in Petaluma. The government filed a notice against the town on March 22 claiming that a recent project caused stress to the tree, causing it to fall on April 10, killing a tree faller, Kevin Cruz, 39, of San Jose, during a storm in March 2023.

Local project crews stressed a young oak, causing the soil and destabilized roots to fail, causing it to fall on April 10, killing a tree faller, Kevin Cruz, 39, of San Jose, during a storm in March 2023.

A Marinwood, Calif., resident found four ducklings huddled together. The ducklings had crawled into a garden bed at Palos Verdes Animal Hospital on March 28.

The rest of the ducklings were found to be dead in a nearby area. The hospital's director of animal welfare, Dr. Jennifer Moore, said the ducklings had been born recently and had been taken care of by a local duck enthusiast.

The ducklings were treated and examined over the last few days. They were given a special diet and food, and were given a warm environment. The ducklings are now healthy and are expected to return to the wild soon.
